Historic Winter Pattern
Finally Fades

Andover, MA (PRWEB) February 18, 2010 --WSI (Weather Services International) Corporation expects temperatures for the approaching period (March-May) to average warmer than normal across all European locations, except for Iberia.

"After another brutally cold winter month, it appears that the cold will recede back into Scandinavia during March," said WSI seasonal forecaster Dr. Todd Crawford. "Further, we think that April and May will be characterized by more widespread, above-normal temperatures, especially in northern and western sections."

In March, WSI predicts regional temperature anomalies as follows: Scandinavia Colder than normal UK - Colder than normal Northern Mainland -Milder than normal Southern Mainland -Milder than normal

In April, WSI sees the monthly breakdown as: Scandinavia -Milder than normal UK -Milder than normal Northern Mainland -Milder than normal Southern Mainland -Cooler than normal

In May, WSI forecasts: Scandinavia -Milder than normal UK -Milder than normal Northern Mainland - Milder than normal Southern Mainland -Colder than normal WSI, providing customized weather information to energy traders, will issue its next seasonal outlook (for the April-June period) on 19 March.
